

Award Criteria

A delegate will have the opportunity to be eligible for an award if they showcase skills that make him or her stand out during the simulation. Delegates must prepare themselves in order to properly answer any doubts that delegates have on their proposals.

Chairs will be able to recognize the following aspects which form a major part of our award criteria;

- Creativity: If a delegate can demonstrate creativeness with their solutions, then its clear that the delegate knows and understands the spirit of a MUN.
- Knowledge: All delegates must have done extensive research on the topic and prepare their arguments to assure they stand out during the sessions.

- Leadership: If a delegate really wants to stand out, they will have to demonstrate leadership through the whole simulation, they must know how to guide and motivate a group of people to work together towards a common goal.
- Collaborative: Being collaborative is a key element to becoming a good leader, it is very important for delegates to take everyone's perspectives into account, and to respect and treat them all equally, as the whole committee is working to accomplish the same goal, therefore, they must work together to achieve it.
- Formality: Lastly, if you want to be rewarded at the end of the simulation, you must showcase formality, and by this we mean you must take everything that happens in the simulation seriously. Also, you shall not use offensive words that could harm other's feelings, you must maintain a both formal and professional position until the simulation is over.

NOTE; In case of a tie, the final decision will be determined by the score your position paper obtained.

Also take into consideration that warnings will lower the points you obtain during the simulation, and will probably also determine whether you get an award at the end of the simulation.
